Are you looking for something a bit different? Only a couple of thousand Marauder S55 coupes were made in '63 and I'm told that very few survive! The S55 Marauder was the high performance version of the 2 door Monterey coupe. Obviously it's very similar to a 63 Ford Galaxie, it comes from the same stable and shares all the running gear from that years big Fords. Lots of these cars went racing and were apparently very successful. They all had the 390 engine. Luckily with the S55 being the top of the range you get power steering and servo brakes. This example has had a lot of new parts and a brake servo upgrade. The engine has obviously been "played" with, it has twin 4 branch Hooker headers, a big Edelbrock carb and goes like stink!! The engine uses no oil, is mechanically very quiet (unlike the 113db exhaust note!!) and feels immensely strong. The car is 100% reliable, does not overheat in a traffic jam on a hot day, steers and stops straight and goes like a bomb. (...)
